What is Chronic Wasting Disease (CWD) and can I get it?

- An incurable deadly disease in cervids, such as deer and moose, that affects the brain and nervous system, caused by a contagious, misshapen protein (prion).
- It spreads from direct contact, body fluids and antler velvet, and can stay in the environment for years.
- It is unclear if people can contract CWD, but it is recommended not to eat meat from sick or CWD positive deer.

What should I know when dropping off a Deer Head?

- When cutting off the head, make sure to leave at least 4 inches of neck meat attached.
- Know the date and location of the harvested deer (maps will be provided). If bringing in multiple heads know this information for each head.
- Provide the Deer Tag License Number for each head brought in.
- If you want to keep antlers please have them removed before dropping off heads.
